Best Practices for Website Accessibility

- Make the website text high contrast on a plain background. Using off-white instead of bright white reduces glare. Red is often the hardest color for people with low vision to see.
- Provide text captioning on videos. If you are using videos that you have created, use a captioning program such as one provided by YouTube.
- Use text descriptions on electronic documents to make visual content available to people with vision impairments by using a screen reader. Provide all photos and images with alternate text descriptions.
- Provide a text-only alternative for visually presented interactive formats on your website (e.g. maps, drop-down menus).
- All electronic materials should be produced in mainstream file formats.
